Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 27 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Unsettled conditions with heavy showers. Feeling cooler from tonight.

Today:
A dry start with some bright spells. One or two showers breaking out during the morning, but these becoming more widespread and turning heavy during the afternoon. Hail and thunder possible. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Tonight:
Afternoon thunderstorms and showers clear into the evening ahead, leaving a dry but cloudy start to the night. Further showers during the early hours. Feeling cooler with a breeze. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Wednesday:
Rather cloudy with scattered showers to start the day. Showers breaking out more widely again from late morning, with hail and thunder. Feeling cooler, and breezy near the coast. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Unsettled conditions throughout, bringing a mix of clear or sunny spells and scattered showers, some of the showers heavy with thunder. Windy in coastal areas at first.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.